AUTHOR SUMMARY

A 320-page literary novel about origin and authorship in the AI age.

AI ANALYSIS

A philosophical inquiry into authorship woven through the fragmented narrative of a found manuscript, examining how meaning accrues through layers of interpretation rather than singular creation. The novel interrogates the boundary between original thought and algorithmic reproduction, asking whether a text's truth depends on who—or what—first conceived it. Vodopivec traces the genealogy of ideas across human and machine consciousness, suggesting that origin itself may be a fiction we tell ourselves.
